

BASIC CHECK-UP

“Healthy Baby”
(under 1 year old)

Who is this Check-UP recommended for?

For newborns and children under 1 year old
For parents who want to make sure their baby is growing and developing properly.

Before vaccination
A comprehensive examination can help assess the child's health before vaccination.

For parents' peace of mind
If you notice fussiness, frequent spit-up, colic, or simply want to make sure your baby is healthy.

Specialist consultations

- Pediatrician

Initial examination, recommendations on nutrition, introduction of complementary foods and daily routine, plus review of examination results.

- Neurologist

Assessment of muscle tone, reflexes, and nervous system development.

Ultrasound diagnostics

- Neurosonography (NSG) — an ultrasound examination of the brain, important for the early detection of possible neurological abnormalities.

Additionally, if needed:

✚ Stomach ultrasound — helps assess the stomach and may be recommended for children with frequent spit-up, colic, abdominal pain, poor appetite, or vomiting. It can help identify conditions such as gastroesophageal reflux, pylorospasm, and certain developmental abnormalities.

Laboratory tests:

🧪 CBC (Complete Blood Count) — helps detect signs of inflammation and anemia and assess the child's overall health.

🧪 Urinalysis (UA) — helps assess kidney and urinary tract function.

Additionally, if needed:

✚ Stool analysis (coprology) — may be recommended if there are digestive problems.

✚ Bilirubin — may be recommended for newborns in cases of jaundice.
